CHAPTER ONE

As the wonderful waves crashed down on the silky sand, the crew knew this was a perfect opportunity to go spear fishing.

After all, they were hungry.

“Let’s go,” said Hunter. He was ready and eager to catch fish.

A few hours after searching for a good place to go fishing they found the place. They got ready, put their gear on and dived into the water.

CHAPTER TWO

They were successful, catching many big fish to eat but they saw something strange. There was a metal box.

You may think it's just some ordinary piece of litter thrown into the sea but no. There were dried red patches on it.

“Blood?” wondered Artemis. Slowly but surely they made their way to the metal box. It was huge. It took all five of the men, Hunter, Artemis, David, Noah and Christian to lift the box and place it on the boat.

They opened the box.

CHAPTER THREE

WOAH! Noah was flabbergasted.

A dead body?

There was also a 1978 revolver lying next to the dead corpse.

Should we call the police?

“NO!” David yelled.

“Hmmm, that’s strange,” Christian thought.

“We found a dead body but he doesn’t want to report it?”

“Seems like it.” said Noah, still shivering over the sight of a dead body right before his eyes.

It was about to hit 9 PM so the men decided to head back home.

It took 30 minutes and everyone was starving.

With their last remaining energy they started a fire, cooked the fish and ate. They all agreed to meet up again at a beach for more spearfishing the next day.

Christian was wondering about who that body could have been..

CHAPTER FOUR

The next day he got ready and watched the news.

BREAKING NEWS!!!

A MAN HAS GONE MISSING AND WAS LAST SEEN
IN THE PACIFIC OCEAN at 8pm.

ANY SIGHTINGS OF HIM SHOULD BE REPORTED.

“We were there yesterday.”

“That man who was reported missing – could it have been him?”

He needed to let the crew know but he could not tell David as he was suspicious of him. “What if I reported it?” he wondered.

It was almost 12am so he started heading to the beach where they had agreed to meet. At the beach they could not find David anywhere..

“Where’s David?”asked Noah.

“I’m not sure,” said Christian.”

“That’s strange,” said Hunter.

“What is he doing then?”

They decided to forget about it and started unloading their gear and diving in. Yet another successful day of spear fishing had been accomplished. Just as they were heading back, they noticed something.

Another metal box? This was really confusing.

Hesitating whether they should open the box or not they eventually decided they should. That’s when it hit them... The one time David doesn’t turn up for spearfishing there’s a crisis.

CHAPTER FIVE

The next day, Noah decided enough was enough. He went to the police station and reported his friend.

After all the evidence had been collected, the police came to the conclusion that David was indeed the murderer.

There was plentiful evidence such as fingerprints found on the revolver and on the metal box plus many more. He got sent to court later that day and was found guilty and sentenced to 80 years in prison. Nobody knew the true story behind the reasons why he murdered the two people. Rumour has it that the murders were sparked by a serious argument involving money.

The crew was sad that they had lost a member of their own, but after all he was a murderer.

“Right! Let’s just forget about it,” Noah said. Afterwards, they all went home and lived a good life, with friends who they knew and trusted.
