My old nanny Nell and my granddad
Mick.
Always thinking of you.

Once upon a time there were two pigeons called Penelope and Bob. They decided to make a nest on a balcony, and she gave birth to one egg. She called her baby Wendy.

Six weeks later she laid another two eggs, so she didn't have as much time for Wendy as she would have liked.

Wendy decided to go on an adventure in London.

Wendy flew over the city of London and came down for a rest at St Pauls Cathedral.

She then met a pigeon called John who was eating some bread that a kind lady threw down.

With a mouthful of bread, he asked Wendy to join him.

John offered to take Wendy to see the King.

As they flew over Buckingham Palace, the King was on the balcony.

He saw Wendy and John and he gave a big wave.

Wendy waved back, shouting “woo hoo”!

Wendy and John were very hot,
when they suddenly saw a little girl drop her ice cream, which they flew down to enjoy.

From out of nowhere jumped a large ginger cat!

It almost caught John as they flew away at super speed.

Wendy saw the bright lights of Tower Bridge and came down for a rest at the Tower of London.

Suddenly a huge crow swooped down to attack poor Wendy.

John grabbed Wendy's wing and they flew away at lighting speed.

Wendy and John saw an alleyway in the distance.

They flew into the alleyway and hid behind some bins.

John told Wendy not to worry, because everything was going to be okay.

When the coast was clear Wendy took John to her home, where they sat for a while on the rooftop, looking at the stars in the sky.

John asked Wendy to marry him and be with him forever.

Wendy said “yes” and John placed a pink band on her foot.

8 weeks later an incredibly happy
Wendy told John she was going to lay some eggs and the two pigeons
danced for joy
